SUPPLY CHAINS ARE IN THE BOARDROOM

A wave of challenges — COVID-19, environmental disasters, unstable trade relations, and growing regulatory, political and social pressures — have super-charged both the urgency and importance of rethinking supply chain strategy and operations.

All this is occurring in an environment where expectations about how businesses relate to stakeholders have changed, and continue to change, in potentially radical ways.

With so much at stake, CEOs and boards must play an active role in strategy, planning, policy and oversight.

To achieve this, we're bringing together a small group of the best minds in leadership together to discuss, debate and decide on pathways forward.

RESILIENT, SUSTAINABLE, COMPASSIONATE

For at least a half-century, most companies evaluated supply chain performance exclusively on the basis of cost and efficiency. These remain important even now, but a combination of political, social and material forces is pushing other factors to the fore — among them resilience, sustainability, social impact and ethics.

INVITE-ONLY, EXCLUSIVELY CEOs AND BOARD MEMBERS

A select number of active and former CEOs and active board members will participate in the conversation on February 25, 2022, at The Ritz-Carlton, Naples resort in Naples, Florida.

The founding organizers are Raj Gupta, former CEO of Rohm & Haas and current chair of Aptiv (formerly Delphi Automotive); Pat Russo, former CEO of Alcatel-Lucent and current chair of Hewlett Packard Enterprise; Maggie Wilderotter, the board chair at DocuSign; and Dr. Subhash Makhija, CEO and co-founder of GEP.

The total number of forum participants is capped at 10-15 CEOs and board members to promote meaningful exchange, connection and deeper dialogue. To learn more about participating in this critical event, contact the forum at ceo.forum@gep.com
